

Volume 28, Issue 3Research Announcement*A Global Approach To Crime And Violence In Jamaica

Peter Jones

Economic Development Institute, Janus International Development Agency

Abstract

The problems of crime and the quality of justice have become central issues in public debate and important public policy concerns in a number of Caribbean countries. This problem is perhaps most acute in Jamaica which has acquired an unenviable reputation for having a high rate of violent crime. There has been much research and discussion on this matter.

Published as a working paper in Economic Development Institute

Paper is available at URL:

Peter Jones

Economic Development Institute, Janus International Development Agency

liontraders@yahoo.com